

I highly disorage that the current no telemarketing law in Indiana be s superceeded by any national law. I can't emphasize enough how nice it is to have peace in the home without telemarketing. I used to get 5-6 calls per day, and now get none.
Groups who want to solicit me have the freedom to do it via postal mail.
I feel that the sanctity of the home warrants a citizen to have the right to determine if phone solicitation is permitted.

The home is the a place where the home owner should be allowed to define who can enter. Again, solicitation groups have enough rights to contact me via postal mail.

I feel the Indiana law is excellent, and I commend Steve Carter for advocating it.

Please do not do anything to interfere with it.

Thanks,
